This classic Queenslander was a beloved family home from 1971 until last year but is now empty and needs someone to give her a little TLC to bring her back to her former beauty. The essence of beauty is good bone structure, and this lovely old home certainly has that. With a new roof, and in good structural condition she is ripe for a nip, tuck, and makeover to give her a new lease of life.

Built in 1947 with craftsmanship and high quality materials, as a War Service home, she still possesses beautiful period features such as the original casement windows, polished timber floors, an ornate plaster ceiling with decorated cornices, and an art-deco style ceiling rose in the lounge room. At some stage the house was updated with false walls and ceiling, but these can be removed to revert back to the original high ceilings and VJ timber walls which make Queenslanders so attractive.
